First author Elizabeth Gilbert found love and inspiration in Bali when writing her book Eat, Pray, Love. Then, actress Julia Roberts followed in her footsteps in the book's big screen adaptation. We head out with our private guide to see filming locations from the beloved film and heartwarming memoir.

The first stop is the Tegallalang Rice Terrace, verdant steps of rice paddies dotted with feathery palm trees. Then we make our way back to Ubud to see the 16th-century Royal Palace, passing through the village of Petulu—famous for the thousands of white herons that flock here each evening.

Stretch your legs with a stroll through the colorful Ubud Market, bargaining for locally crafted wares and Balinese souvenirs as we walk toward the Cafe Wayan, where we can snag a seat at the table where Julia Roberts dined. Enjoy a delicious lunch in this breezy outdoor eatery, sampling Balinese specialties before making our way south to meet Ketut Liyer, the medicine man who appeared in the movie. You can opt to have him read your future if you'd like, or just learn about traditional Balinese medicine and admire his artwork.

Our final stop is at the golden sands of Padang Padang Beach near the clifftop Uluwatu Temple, where 2 scenes from the movie were filmed. Take in the scenery and watch surfers tackling the breaks offshore, lingering for the sunset before the drive back to your hotel.
